Partial renal ablation in female rats is followed by compensatory renal growth (CRG) in the remnant kidney during the first week. CRG is characterized by increased DNA content, cell proliferation and the development of glomerular and mesangial hypertrophy. The hormonal mechanisms involved in CRG are unknown. To define the role of ovarian hormones in the genesis of CRG, we examined CRG in ovariectomized, sham-operated and castrated female rats after one-third renal ablation. CRG of 85% occurred in sham-operated and ovariectomized females but not in castrated females. To define whether endogenous nitric oxide (NO) is involved in CRG, we examined CRG in L-NAME treated females. CRG was abolished in sham-operated, but not in ovariectomized rats given L-NAME. CRG did not occur in castrated females given L-NAME. We conclude that CRG does not occur when NO production by kidneys is inhibited, indicating a role for endogenous NO in the genesis of CRG in this model. We suggest that the

Tactical Battle System (TBS) The TBS is the battle system that makes the whole game. From the battle on the field and the turn-based attack actions, to the changes to the form of the battle, there are a number of weapons and items that you can use. The TBS is different from traditional RPG battles by allowing you to choose the time limit for each action at any time during battle. The time limit is linked to the enemy's HP so that you can quickly handle more complex battles. Game Flow (GF) The GF is the process in which you play the game. That is, it reflects all the battles in the game. In other words, GF includes the process of getting to the battle area, the battle flow, and the results of the battles. You can choose GFs before a battle, in battle, and after battles. This allows you to carefully choose the best GF for the enemies that appear at that time. STRATEGIC MAP SYSTEM (SMS) A strategic map of the Lands Between is implemented in the GF. The message that is displayed in the strategic map is linked to the turn-based action and the status of the battle (such as an enemy's HP). Therefore, the strategic map makes it easy to know the current battle situation of the entire party and the enemy at once. Click to expand... Mobius Teardown: The developer went to Kickstarter to promote their game. They have a demo version of their game to buy: Click to expand... The perks they are offering for backers: The developer is so determined that the backer gets a JRPG style game and action RPG experience that they're giving away a $50 steam code just for the Kickstarter. Considering how JRPG fans are still a tiny fraction of the Steam gaming market, that's probably just going to be a drop in the bucket for them. On the other hand, it could build a nice following that eventually helps them break into a broader market. Anyway, we want to hear your thoughts on this, as we can't be the only ones wondering about them. Did you watch the development stream? The game sounds pretty interesting, but I have no idea what the combat is supposed to be like. I have been following it since the beginning but I always feel like I am missing something. Since I am not looking
