An attacker can use this issue to create a temporary 64-bit server image that can be uploaded to the target. I have a 32 bit and 64 bit processor (Windows 2008 64 Bit). Running XE5 and XE6. I have a program that has a 64 bit component. Update - The solution that worked for me was to run the upgrade tool (File->Upgrade...) in Windows Explorer. The firewall had it blocked. The error message was in the format mentioned on your list. Needless to say, I did a full rebuild of my RAD Studio development environment and am now running XE6 Professional 2019. Update 6/16/2020: I upgraded to RAD Studio 2019 on a Win10 machine. When I installed a new "update" via File->Updates, it installed 64-bit version of XE6 instead of 32-bit. I then manually installed the 32-bit version (default) as there was no 64-bit version listed in the "Updates" tab in the main menu. I now have the 32 and 64-bit versions of XE6 installed. A: Use the following URL to retrieve the update 19.3.2.1. Extract the Packages64bit\Windows\Embarcadero\RADStudio. This is a directory inside your Packages64bit\3. Copy Embarcadero\RADStudio\bin to your main folder. 4. Run Embarcadero\RADStudio\bin\radstudio.exe. 5. Click the setup tab, and select "Update". This update will show up in the list. Selecting this will install it. A: According to this: The patch has not yet been released for Windows 10. For your situation, you can install it manually as follows.
