DoD News News Article Senators Eye Korean Security Posture, U.S. Troop Presence in Asia WASHINGTON, April 22, 2008 □ North Korea and South Korea must maintain a strategic partnership that will contribute to regional peace and stability and build a more secure environment in the Asia-Pacific region, U.S. senators said yesterday during a meeting with Korea's defense ministers. "We reaffirm our commitment to the full implementation of the U.N. Security Council resolutions and continue to coordinate closely on the implementation of U.N. sanctions against North Korea," U.S. Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates said at the Senate Armed Services Committee hearing. "We also continue to work very closely with South Korea to insure that the security of the Korean Peninsula is protected." The meeting came as the Senate-House conference committee mulls the Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2008, and amid rising tensions between North Korea and China that has caused concern of a renewed conflict on the Korean peninsula. The standing-up ceremony at Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam, Hawaii, commemorated the relationship of the United States and South Korea, and the provision of military training missions in South Korea to U.S. service members. "As you can see, it's been many, many years," said U.S. Air Force Col. Robert Stephens, director of operations for U.S. Forces Korea.

“It all starts back in 1961 with the end of the Korean War. It’s very much a love letter to the United States and South Korea, and that continues to grow.” “We are promoting a security structure for Northeast Asia that’s completely independent of military conflict,” Gates said. “You know, when you meet as close as you do, so close together, it’s impossible for one side to determine whether the other side’s intentions are peaceful or not, and they are not. So it is critical that there be a relationship in which both sides have the confidence that they can predict each other’s intentions.” Korea
