After calling GDB with a base-address (and all else being correct), I get an error message: WARNING: Unable to read mapping information from /proc/self/maps; assumed none error: process can't access /proc/self/maps: no such file or directory If I hit enter, GDB will drop back into shell mode and not go back to the main interactive GDB. However, if I exit shell mode and relaunch GDB (using /usr/local/bin/gdb), the error message will not appear. It is more of a "seen this once" and "i'll just live with it" kind of thing. This does not always happen, just one out of hundreds of occasions (there are times when the error message does not appear). Any ideas? A: I would double check your environment variables. I used to get that very infrequently, and I found that uninstalling gcc 5 and installing gcc 4.9 fixed it. I know that's not an ideal solution, but if you try that, you'll know if it's your environment configuration. i s t h e t h i r d b i g g e s t v a l u e i n 3 , - 0 . 3 , 1 / 2 , 0 . 1 ? 0 . 1 W h a t i s t h e s e c o n d

This paper argues that the MRC Prison Study has provided a context within which the new rehabilitation paradigm can be evaluated. As the study has not yet become as familiar to the readership of this journal as the reports of the Royal Commission of 1948 and 1981, an early review of the study is given. Trends over the study's 25-year course are highlighted and evidence is adduced to explain why these are relevant to the new rehabilitation paradigm. The second part of the paper consists of a review of the contribution of the study to the rehabilitation debate, using the ideas and research of the study's main author, Patrick Forest.TOKYO -- Japan's Cabinet said Saturday it will seek to reinterpret the country's constitution so that the Imperial Household Agency can continue to maintain the emperor's official residences. The Cabinet approved a resolution that demands the government to act swiftly after a recent high court ruling quashed the Imperial Household Agency's authorization of the maintenance of the emperor's homes in Tokyo and Kyoto, which are also the emperor's official residences. The emperor is bound to retire in October and his residence in the Imperial Palace in Tokyo will be closed. But the authorization of public maintenance of the emperor's residences is needed for a smooth transition to the emperor's son and designated heir. The session of Cabinet, which did not identify its source of authority, said the government will "take all necessary measures within the shortest possible time" to address the issue. The Cabinet session was held at the Japanese Imperial Palace, which is also the palace where the imperial family lives. The Cabinet also said the emperor's sons will be assigned more duties. An official at the Cabinet said the Cabinet plans to request the government to order the Imperial Household Agency to update its annual budget so that the agency's total expenditure comes closer to ¥30 billion (about $285 million). The Imperial Household Agency is the private agency
