We've recently moved to a new location! I suggest coming in for a visit! Tuesday, December 28, 2010 "The Secret to our Success" - The Evolution of Telemarketers It is interesting to hear from marketing execs how their companies "evolved" from what they viewed as a "necessary evil" to "a secret to our success". While it has been said that information technology has radically changed marketing, it has also drastically changed the structure of organizations, including the telephone. Our old location, which catered mainly to wholesale customers, had only three phone lines. One was for the main line for our business; another for a dedicated overflow line; and a third for the answering service. We needed just one call to the answering service if there were questions about placement or sales, and we needed one call to the overflow line if there were too many simultaneous calls for the business line. For example, we might place the business line on the dedicated line if there were 1,000 calls in a day and the business needed it all. Our largest, even then, was only 4,000 per day. When we opened our new office in 2006, we had 6 additional phone lines, which left one for the answering service. That left 5 lines for the three business phone lines. When we added business lines for sale and for letters of interest, the number increased to 7. Now we have 12 lines. We chose the lines for incoming calls by ordering based on expected use during the next few days. Lack of interest in telemarketing When our new company opened, telemarketing was still relatively new. We were told not to advertise it because it was not the "hot" thing to do - there would be a demand for it as the

Category Archives: Music Post navigation It would appear that somewhere along the way, Pink Floyd managed to infiltrate the musical landscape of Detroit. I thought I knew where the influence of the music from "The Wall" might have come from, as it seemed that the Detroit rock scene was primed and ready to accept Pink Floyd. However, upon further research, I learned that the album was an 11 year old B-Side entitled "The Pink", from the 1977 album "Meddle". Several years later, The Clash released their album "London Calling". The album's lead track, "The Guns of Brixton" sounds a bit like "Run Like Hell" from "The Wall". And then I discovered that Blood, Sweat & Tears — a popular Detroit/Floyd tribute band — were the direct progenitors of the well known "Hey Jude" by The Beatles. The song that is most reminiscent of Floyd is the one on "Goin' Up Weeds", by Sublime. The song's bassline is identical to "The Fletcher Song" from "The Wall". Another tribute to Floyd is "The Way You Used To Do" by The Velvet Underground. Tonight was the first time I heard "Pink" by Jay Farrar, formerly the guitarist for Kyuss. I am not a huge fan of the music, but the song's opening guitar solo is something else. I'm glad I discovered it! It's November 1. I am deep in a groove, and by that, I mean a state of extreme happiness and contentment. Why the particular date? Maybe it has something to do with the fact that I turned 44 today. I want to extend my thanks to all the wonderful people who have supported me along the journey of our 30 years together. I have been fortunate to be surrounded with family and friends who have stood with me over the years. I am grateful to my partner, Stacy, for being my rock, my support, and the one true friend I have ever had. I wish my daughter, Sarah, would come over and chew me out. I really need it! Love, Biff As the curtain falls on my life, I want to leave you with
