Updated April 6, 2020 The average number of clinical visits in the first 3 months after diagnosis for women who have lower extremity cellulitis is two to three; for men, it is one to three. Because lower extremity cellulitis is associated with significant morbidity and occasional mortality, early recognition and treatment are desirable, although this is most difficult when cellulitis is not clinically apparent. Cellulitis is usually associated with a staphylococcal infection. Along with other differentials, cellulitis should be suspected
