Pentalogy of Cantrell with anterior diaphragmatic hernia: a case report and review of the literature. Pentalogy of Cantrell is a rare complex diaphragmatic defect associated with other malformations, mostly cardiac and abdominal. It is usually the result of heterotaxia, and may occur in the form of a part of a spectrum with other congenital malformations. A typical Pentalogy of Cantrell was recognized in this case of a newborn girl, presenting with prenatal diagnosis, with characteristic cutaneous stigmata, diaphragmatic herniation and cardiac abnormality.

INTERVENTION Intervention Services Symptom Management or Clinical Treatment Patients in our emergency department have a wide variety of medical needs, including more than just physical injury. Patients might be concerned with anxiety, fear or a wide range of mental health issues. Other concerns might include chemical dependency issues, suicidality, or issues with finances or legal matters. When we see a patient in the emergency department, we want them to leave feeling better than when they came in. A stabilization and symptom management plan is typically designed after the initial evaluation of a patient's emergency department assessment. The treatment approach for one patient may be quite different than that of another. The only way to fully understand and address each patient's concerns and need for care is to talk with them. We evaluate the health status of the patient (their pain, mobility, history of substance use, history of psychiatric/mental health history, patient comprehension) and determine if they are a candidate for an inpatient or community-based treatment approach. Ultimately, the goal is to direct care and help the patient get back to a state of equilibrium or homeostasis so that they can receive the services they need to be ready to go home. After stabilization of the patient, we will provide an intervention/treatment plan
