so far it is not fully supported by all players. download the player of your choice, and see if that supports this format. q: mysql update statement with where parameter not working i have been struggling with this for a while and cannot figure out why the update statement is not working. i am trying to update a table using where, i know a column exist and that it is a varchar(50) column (this is not a typo), but when i run the php script it does not update the row or give a php error. any suggestions? $sql = "update `post_form_status` set `post_form_status`.`status` = 'pending' where `post_form_status`.`post_id` = '$form_id' and `post_form_status`.`id` = $parameter"; a: insert is different from update, they have their own syntax. and if you're looking for an update without where clause, you can try something like this: update `post_form_status` set `post_form_status`.`status` = 'pending' if you want to update a row that has $form_id = 1 then do this: update `post_form_status` set `post_form_status`.`post_id` = '$form_id' note the where clause must use a equality comparison for $form_id (it's a string) update `post_form_status` set `post_form_status`.`post_id` = 1 note the where clause must use a a comparison operator such as = or like for the value that you want to match against the post_id column (it's a string) you can also look at this so q/a for more explanations: update mysql update command where clause (not) using the 'where' clause with update irving, texas -- with the salary cap nearly in place, it's time to make our "in and out" list of players who will be returning to the cowboys. for the sake of argument, i've listed the players who will be returning as the starter, but a change in roles is not necessarily a change in the starter. (a post will be made before the start of free agency.
